Breast Reduction Surgery Improves Women's Quality of Life BAXT CosMedical® announces seminar on the "Scar-Less" Breast Reduction Technique

PARAMUS, NJ, February 9, 2017 -- After years of dealing with pain, discomfort and self-esteem issues that goes along with having large breasts more women are looking at breast reduction surgery. Breast reduction, known as reduction mammoplasty, is a procedure done by plastic surgeons to surgically remove excess fat, tissue and skin in the breast.

"Large breasts can not only interfere with daily activities but cause back, neck and shoulder pain," says Dr. Shwetambara Parakh, board certified plastic surgeon at BAXT Cosmedical®. "Not only are there limitations to a woman's activities caused by physical discomfort but often there are psychological concerns affecting a woman's quality of life," continues Dr. Parakh.

Traditional breast reduction has been performed by plastic surgeons for over 50 years but some women with large, heavy breast have been reluctant to undergo this surgery due to concerns about pain, extensive scars, changes in nipple sensation, recovery time and other issues. Today, there is a better option to traditional breast reduction surgery.

At BAXT Cosmedical®, Dr. Sherwood Baxt, board certified plastic surgeon, is an innovator in the "Scar-less" Breast Reduction technique. Dr. Baxt explains that, "the scar-less technique has many advantages over traditional breasts reduction surgery including, minimally invasive procedure, minimal pain, no general anesthesia, less recovery and downtime."
